Comments:

The calf market remained strong again this week as all classes sold on a higher market with very active buyers. The futures market has helped us along with a more bullish tone over the last week and grain fields appear to be in a better shape for stocker calves to be turned out on. Packer cows and bulls are still backed up at the packing houses and in turn, the packer market is struggling to keep up. We only have two cattle sales left before we take a week off for Thanksgiving and the market looks to be promising for any calves that need to be marketed. Let us know how we can help you out with your livestock needs.
