The futures market did not respond well to the cattle on feed report that came out on Friday. The market has aggressively reacted to the increase in placements that were reported in August. It appears there may be follow through pressure continuing to develop through the end of the year from concerns about the ability for the demand to keep up with the growing supplies going into the feedyards. With that being said, cattle today sold mostly on a steady market. We had another good set of calves here with good demand, even on a sticky market. Let us know how we can help you market your livestock!
